PRELIMINARY STATEMENT¹

2 While no Wells Fargo shareholder objects to this historic Settlement or the proposed 3 Reimbursement Awards for Co-Lead Plaintiffs, four individual investors—who collectively own 4 less than 0.0002% of Wells Fargo’s outstanding shares—challenge Co-Lead Counsel’s fee 5 request. Their objections are meritless.

6 Ted Frank, a professional objector with a well-documented animus toward plaintiff-7 attorney fees, envisions covetous plaintiffs’ lawyers lined up for a “gravy train” to extract 8 “nuggets of gold” from Wells Fargo. Frank Obj. 2, 20. But his colorful (mixed) metaphors 9 cannot supplant the governing law and established facts, which amply support the requested fee.
10 Frank’s portrayal of this hard-fought, highly uncertain litigation—involving one of the most 11 difficult theories in corporate law—as posing “minimal risk” (id. at 10) is pure fantasy. And his 12 view that lower fees are mandated in “megafund” settlements has already been rejected by the 13 Ninth Circuit. Frank’s unavailing arguments are largely parroted by “serial meritless objectors” 14 Steve Miller and John Pentz, see Hefler v. Wells Fargo & Co., 2018 WL 6619983, at *16 n.19 15 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2018), as well as Kevin Fisher, who objects through a criminal defense 16 lawyer with no discernable experience in derivative litigation.

17 Additionally, while Frank casts the rates billed for contract and staff attorneys as “surreal” 18 or “fake” (Frank Obj. 1), the record demonstrates those lawyers performed high-level document 19 review and analysis akin to junior associates—not “unskilled” (id. at 16) or “clerical” work 20 (Miller Obj. 3)—and their rates reflect those prevailing in the relevant legal community. This 21 Court approved similar staff attorney rates in Hefler, and other courts have approved these rates 22 for some of these same staff and contract attorneys. The Court should also decline the 23 Professional Objectors’ invitation to become the first to require, in evaluating the reasonableness 24 of a requested fee, that contract or staff attorneys be billed “at cost.” But even applying at-cost

25 ¹ Capitalized terms and abbreviations retain their meanings from the opening brief. The 26 objections by professional objectors Steve Miller and John Pentz (Dkt. 279) as well as Theodore 27 (“Ted”) Frank (Dkt. 281) (collectively, “Professional Objectors”) are referenced as “Miller Obj.”
28 and “Frank Obj.,” and the objections by Cathy LeBendig (Dkt. 282) and Kevin Fisher (Dkt. 284) (together with the Professional Objectors, “Objectors”) are referenced as “LeBendig Obj.” and “Fisher Obj.” Unless otherwise indicated, all emphasis has been added, and all internal citations and quotation marks have been omitted.

1 rates for contract attorneys, as well as assigning the lowest staff attorney rate billed in this case 2 ($300, lower than in Hefler) to all staff attorney time, would result in a lodestar multiplier within 3 the presumptively acceptable 1.0-4.0 range.

4 Indeed, while Frank purports to advocate a fee reflecting the “prevailing market rate” for 5 counsel’s services (Frank Obj. 15), he discounts that the fee was heavily negotiated by perhaps 6 the most sophisticated market participant there is: Wells Fargo. No absent class member 7 recoveries are at issue in this derivative action, and Frank provides no credible reason why Wells 8 Fargo would purposefully cheat itself out of money by agreeing to an excessive fee.

9 The Court should also reject Objectors’ attempt to undermine the Parties’ bargained-for 10 agreement that the Clawbacks and Reforms add $80 million in value to this Settlement. The 11 facts memorialized in the Settlement Stipulation and recounted by the Mediator, moreover, 12 demonstrate Co-Lead Counsel’s efforts and the import of this derivative action constitute a 13 proximate cause of those measures. But even assessing the $68 million requested fee (which 14 includes no reimbursement for costs) based solely on the $240 million cash recovery yields only 15 a slight upward adjustment from the Ninth Circuit’s 25% benchmark. That is well justified in 16 light of this extraordinary recovery, the risks Plaintiffs’ Counsel faced in achieving it, their 17 devotion of over 2 ½ years to pursuing Wells Fargo’s claims on a contingency basis, and the 18 reasonable 3.03 lodestar multiplier.

19 The Court can readily dispense with Objectors’ remaining arguments. Contending Co-20 Lead Counsel should be precluded from allocating the fee award, Frank once again resorts to 21 supposition accompanied by inapposite caselaw and mischaracterizations of the record. Finally, 22 LeBendig’s counsel provides no credible justification for compensation, and their passing 23 challenge to Co-Lead Counsel’s lodestar is baseless. The fee request should be approved.

24 ARGUMENT

25 I. THE LACK OF OBJECTIONS TO THE SETTLEMENT OR REIMBURSEMENT 26 AWARDS TO CO-LEAD PLAINTIFFS SUPPORTS THEIR APPROVAL

27 Following an extensive Notice campaign, none of the holders of Wells Fargo’s 4.5 billion 28 outstanding shares—which include some of the world’s largest institutional investors—objected

1 to the Settlement, raising “a strong presumption” that its terms are favorable. Hefler, 2018 WL 2 6619983, at *9. Nor do any shareholders object to granting a $25,000 Reimbursement Award to 3 each Co-Lead Plaintiff, which should likewise be approved.

4 While recognizing this Court rarely approves plaintiff awards of more than $5,000, Co-5 Lead Counsel submit this case warrants an exception to the general rule. Of particular 6 significance, unlike class cases where such awards would detract from class members’ recovery, 7 here they will come from Co-Lead Counsel’s fee. Further, as recounted in their declarations, Co-8 Lead Plaintiffs devoted significant time to obtaining this exceptional result for Wells Fargo and 9 were intimately involved in nearly every aspect of the case. FPPA Decl. (Dkt. 278-4) ¶¶ 4-7; 10 Birmingham Decl. (Dkt. 278-5) ¶¶ 4-7. They have thus complied with the Court’s directive to 11 “provid[e] appropriate detail and documentation in connection with their motion for service 12 awards.” Prelim. Approval Order (“PA Order”) (Dkt. 274) 13.

13 II. OBJECTORS MOUNT NO CREDIBLE CHALLENGE TO THE FEE REQUEST

14 A. Objectors’ Proposed Rule Limiting Fees in “Megafund” Cases Improperly 15 Disregards the Parties’ Agreement and Contravenes Ninth Circuit Law.

16 The Professional Objectors and Fisher ask the Court to reduce Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s fee 17 because this is a “megafund” case. Caselaw and common sense dictate otherwise.

18 As an initial matter, Objectors’ challenges to the fee in this derivative action are 19 fundamentally inapposite. They recycle arguments regularly advanced in class actions, where 20 absent class members’ recoveries are directly impacted by class counsel’s fee. But because 21 recoveries in derivative cases “belong to the corporation on whose behalf the suit was brought,” 22 Bell Atl. Corp. v. Bolger, 2 F.3d 1304, 1307 n.4 (3d Cir. 1993), any attorneys’ fee comes directly 23 and solely from the corporation. That distinction is particularly significant here, as Co-Lead 24 Counsel negotiated the fee with Wells Fargo.

25 Those negotiations commenced, moreover, only after the substantive terms of the 26 Settlement were reached. See, e.g., Settlement Stip. (Dkt. 270-1) § V.H(44); Weinstein Decl.
 27 (Dkt. 270-3) ¶¶ 7-12. Further, contrary to Frank’s and Fisher’s suggestion that Wells Fargo was 28 motivated to pay an excessive fee to conclude the litigation, the Settlement “is expressly not

1 conditioned upon[] the approval of an application for attorneys’ fees.” Settlement Stip.
2 § V.A(11). Indeed, that the agreed-upon fee may in part reflect Wells Fargo’s desire to achieve 3 “global peace” (Frank Obj. 4) attests to the quality of Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s work resolving this 4 case and multiple related proceedings—for which they should be rightfully compensated. The 5 facts, in short, demonstrate sophisticated market participants engaged at arm’s length, with the 6 aid of highly experienced Mediators, to arrive at a reasonable result. The Parties’ agreement 7 should therefore be accorded substantial weight, regardless of this case’s “megafund” status. See 8 In re Rambus Inc. Derivative Litig., 2009 WL 166689, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 20, 2009) (in 9 granting fee request, noting “the proposed fee award is the product of arm’s-length negotiation 10 between counsel highly experience[d] in shareholder derivative actions and agreed upon only 11 after the other terms of the Settlement were negotiated”).

12 Further, the Ninth Circuit expressly has “not adopt[ed]” a categorical rule that the 13 percentage of an award must “decrease[] as the amount of the fund increases.” Vizcaino v.
14 Microsoft Corp., 290 F.3d 1043, 1047 (9th Cir. 2002). Fund size is “one relevant circumstance 15 to which courts must refer.” Id. at 1047; see also In re Optical Disk Drive Prods. Antitrust Litig., 16 2016 WL 7364803, at *12 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 2016) (rejecting objectors’ argument that because 17 the case involved a “megafund,” it “require[ed] an automatic reduction in attorney fees,” and 18 observing “there is no automatic rule in the Ninth Circuit which requires an automatic 19 percentage”). And while some courts have endorsed a sliding scale approach, it has also “been 20 criticized by respected courts and commentators, who contend that such a fee scale often gives 21 counsel an incentive to settle cases too early and too cheaply.” In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 264 22 F.3d 201, 284 n.55 (3d Cir. 2001); see also Fitzpatrick Decl. (Dkt. 278-1) ¶¶ 22-23; Supp. Decl.
23 of Brian T. Fitzpatrick (“Fitzpatrick Supp. Decl.”) ¶¶ 3-5 (rebutting Ted Frank’s arguments on 24 this point); In re Toyota Motor Corp. Unintended Acceleration Mktg., Sales Practices & Prods.
25 Liab. Litig., 2013 WL 12327929, at *34 n.16 (C.D. Cal. June 17, 2013) (“agree[ing] with 26 Plaintiffs’ expert [Professor Fitzpatrick] and other courts, which have found that decreasing a fee 27 percentage based only on the size of the fund would provide a perverse disincentive to counsel to 28 maximize recovery for the class”). Rather, the relevant question, in megafund and non-

1 megafund cases alike, is whether the proposed award “is proper and fair in light of the amount 2 and quality of the work done by the attorneys.” In re TFT-LCD (Flat Panel) Antitrust Litig., 3 2013 WL 1365900, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 3, 2013) (awarding 28.6% of $1.08 billion fund and 4 rejecting objectors’ argument to “reduce the award or use a sliding scale model . . . to avoid a 5 windfall for the attorneys”).

6 In In re Cathode Ray Tube (CRT) Antitrust Litigation, where several objectors “urge[d] 7 the Court either not to use a percentage-of-recovery method, or to reduce the award, because this 8 [wa]s a megafund case,” this Court explained “the best way to guard against a windfall is first to 9 examine whether a given percentage represents too high a multiplier of counsel’s lodestar.” 10 2016 WL 4126533, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 3, 2016). The Court’s analysis is consistent with the 11 Ninth Circuit’s instruction in In re Bluetooth Headset Products Liability Litigation (a case on 12 which Frank relies) that “where awarding 25% of a ‘megafund’ would yield windfall profits for 13 class counsel in light of the hours spent on the case, courts should adjust the benchmark 14 percentage or employ the lodestar method instead.” 654 F.3d 935, 942 (9th Cir. 2011). The 15 court of appeals likewise admonished against categorical rules in In re Washington Public Power 16 Supply System Securities Litigation, explaining “courts cannot rationally apply any particular 17 percentage—whether 13.6 percent, 25 percent or any other number—in the abstract, without 18 reference to all the circumstances of the case.” 19 F.3d 1291, 1298 (9th Cir. 1994) (“WPPSS”).
19 Accordingly, while Miller relies heavily on WPPSS, that decision actually makes clear there is 20 nothing “inherently reasonable” about the per se megafund rule he espouses. Id.

21 Crosschecking the requested percentage fee against Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s lodestar 22 demonstrates there is no windfall, as the resulting 3.03 multiplier resides well within the 23 “presumptively acceptable range of 1.0-4.0” in this Circuit. Dyer v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 303
24 F.R.D. 326, 334 (N.D. Cal. 2014); see also Vizcaino, 290 F.3d at 1046, 1051 n.6 (approving 28% 25 fee from $96.885 million fund, corresponding to 3.65 lodestar multiplier).² It is also lower than

26 ² Ignoring Vizcaino and myriad other decisions approving multipliers over three, Miller claims 27 the fee requested here “is clearly refuted by [WPPSS], where a 13.6% fee request was rejected 28 because it resulted in an excessive lodestar multiplier of 3.1” Miller Obj. 3. But the Ninth Circuit in WPPSS vacated the district court’s fee decision, holding, inter alia, the court “abused its discretion in denying a risk multiplier” in determining the fee. WPPSS, 19 F.3d at 1302.

Footnote continued on next page

1 the 3.22 multiplier the Court accepted in Hefler, see 2018 WL 6619983, at *14, which entailed 2 less risk than this derivative litigation. See infra pp. 13-16. Further, the lodestar is understated, 3 as it excludes time Co-Lead Counsel will devote in the coming months to securing the resolution 4 of the remaining state derivative actions, as well as time spent over the last two months (and 5 going forward) seeking final approval of this Settlement. As in CRT, moreover, this Settlement 6 did not come about in “little time” or with “little effort.” 2016 WL 4126533, at *6. As the Court 7 is aware, it resulted from more than 2 ½ years of investigating the facts, drafting initial and 8 consolidated amended complaints, overcoming two motions to dismiss, reviewing more than 1.1 9 million pages of documents (with more to be reviewed had the parties not agreed to settle) in 10 anticipation of more than 40 depositions, and participating in a lengthy and hotly contested 11 mediation process. See Supp. Joint Decl. (Dkt. 278) ¶¶ 24-35, 91-128, 135-52; Decl. of Hon.
 12 Daniel Weinstein (Ret.) in Support of Final Approval and Attorneys’ Fees (“Weinstein Final 13 Approval/Fee Decl.”) ¶¶ 4-7. And while “the two-plus year lifespan of this litigation is not as 14 lengthy as some other cases,” Plaintiffs’ Counsel “bore a heavy financial burden in expending 15 significant resources”—more than $22.4 million in attorney and support staff time—“on a 16 contingency basis.” Hefler, 2018 WL 6619983, at *13.³

17 The Professional Objectors also overstate the significance of data provided by certain 18 empirical studies analyzing fee awards (see, e.g., Frank Obj. 9-12), which this Court has 19 instructed “does not replace the 25 percent benchmark” but rather “is simply an important 20 additional data point in the determination of an appropriate award.” Rodman, 2018 WL 4030558, 21 at *5. In any event, Professor Brian Fitzpatrick—a leading authority on attorneys’ fees who

23 Additionally, in characterizing lodestar multipliers as “rare and exceptional,” Frank and Fisher 24 rely on decisions addressing federal fee-shifting statutes, which have no bearing here. See Frank 25 Obj. 19 (citing Perdue v. Kenny A., 559 U.S. 542, 546 (2010)); Fisher Obj. 30 (citing Van 26 Gerwen v. Guar. Mut. Life Co., 214 F.3d 1045, 1045 (9th Cir. 2000)). And notwithstanding his attempt to invent a general presumption against lodestar multipliers, Frank has no compunction advocating a large multiplier for himself. See Eubank v. Pella Corp., 2019 WL 1227832, at *9 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 2019) (noting “[t]he $3 million fee award that Frank requests on the objectors’ behalf reflects a lodestar multiplier of 9.3 for Frank”).

27 ³ Contrary to Frank’s suggestion (see Frank Obj. 13), a modest upward adjustment of the 25% benchmark does not require that Plaintiffs’ Counsel “litigate this case to a successful judgment” 28 or “assume six years of substantial risk,” as in Rodman v. Safeway, Inc., 2018 WL 4030558 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2018).

1 authored one of those studies, which this Court has cited with approval⁴—observes “a 28.33% 2 fee award would still be within two standard deviations of the 17.9% mean in the $100-250 3 million range in [his] study.” Fitzpatrick Decl. (Dkt. 278-1) ¶ 25 (citing Brian T. Fitzpatrick, An 4 Empirical Study of Class Action Settlements and Their Fee Awards, 7 J. EMPIRICAL LEGAL STUD.
 5 811, 839 (2010) (“Fitzpatrick Study”)).⁵ Fee requests within two standard deviations above the 6 mean “should be viewed as potentially reasonable but in need of affirmative justification.” Id.
 7 (quoting Theodore Eisenberg & Geoffrey P. Miller, Attorney Fees in Class Action Settlements:
 8 An Empirical Study, 1 J. EMPIRICAL LEGAL STUD. 27, 74 (2004)). The facts here, as Professor 9 Fitzpatrick’s own analysis concludes, amply justify the requested fee. See, e.g., Fee Mot. (Dkt.
 10 277) 12; Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶¶ 40-45.

11 Contrasting with the legally infirm per se rule Objectors propose, Professor Fitzpatrick’s 12 assessment of this case under each of the Ninth Circuit’s factors confirms a $68 million fee is 13 appropriate, even based on the Settlement’s $240 million cash alone. Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶¶ 17-34.
 14 In addition to analyzing the empirical data regarding typical awards in securities class cases (i.e., 15 “factor (5)”)—which do not weigh against the fee proposed here, id. ¶¶ 18-25—Professor 16 Fitzpatrick carefully analyzes six considerations favoring an upward adjustment of the 25% 17 benchmark: factor (1) – the superior result Plaintiffs’ Counsel achieved, measured against typical 18 recoveries in securities class cases, id. ¶ 26; factors (3) and (4) – the significant risks in 19 attempting to prove Wells Fargo Board members knew about or consciously disregarded the 20 Improper Sales Practices, id. ¶ 27; factor (6) – the Clawbacks and Reforms, for which the record 21 supports according credit to Co-Lead Counsel’s efforts, id. ¶ 28; factor (7) – the percentages in 22 standard contingency-fee agreements in individual cases, which suggest a fee of 28% or above is 23 ⁴ See Rodman, 2018 WL 4030558, at *5 (observing that while Fitzpatrick’s study “is older and 24 accounts for fewer years” than a 2017 study by Theodore Eisenberg and Geoffrey Miller, “it 25 examines many more cases”); see also Fitzpatrick Supp. Decl. ¶ 6 (explaining Eisenberg and 26 Miller “do not break down their data as finely as I do”).

27 ⁵ Characterizing the requested fee as “presumptively unreasonable” under a study by Professors 28 Eisenberg and Miller, Frank contends 28.33% “is slightly more than two standard deviations above the mean” in the Fitzpatrick Study, which is 28.3% if one adds 17.9% and 10.4% (i.e., two times the 5.2 standard deviation). Frank Obj. 11 & n.4. Three hundredths of a percent is a slim reed on which to hang an objection, but in any event, because the figures in the Fitzpatrick Study are rounded to the nearest tenth of a percent, Frank is wrong to declare 28.33% is necessarily more than two standard deviations above the mean. See Fitzpatrick Supp. Decl. ¶ 7 n.1.

1 appropriate, id. ¶ 30; and factor (8) – Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s lodestar, which shows they “are 2 receiving a very typical return on their investment of time in a case of this size,” id. ¶ 34.⁶

3 Frank mischaracterizes Professor Fitzpatrick’s opinions as “inadmissible legal 4 conclusions and other legal arguments.” Frank Obj. 13. But there is nothing impermissibly 5 “legal” about analyzing whether the factual considerations set forth by the Ninth Circuit warrant 6 the requested fee. Indeed, Professor Fitzpatrick has offered similar opinions in numerous cases, 7 which to Co-Lead Counsel’s knowledge have never been stricken.⁷ And the only decision Frank 8 cites that even addresses expert opinions regarding reasonable fees is inapposite. In Stathakos v.
9 Columbia Sportswear Co., defendants’ expert, who “claim[ed] to have conducted a line-by-line 10 review of plaintiffs’ lodestar and aver[red] that the hours contained therein [we]re unreasonable,” 11 included in his declaration “improper legal opinions” that “either interpret[ed] or merely quot[ed] 12 case law, the American Bar Association Code of Professional Responsibility, the State Bar of 13 California Professional Code, and the U.S. Attorney Offices’ Attorney Fee Matrix.” 2018 WL 14 1710075, at *5 & n.6 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 9, 2018). Professor Fitzpatrick, by contrast, cites caselaw 15 to present the context within which to evaluate the relevant facts. Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶¶ 21-24.

16 Fisher criticizes Co-Lead Counsel and Professor Fitzpatrick for “fail[ing] to review the 17 attorneys’ fees awarded in derivative settlements between $100 million and $250 million.”
18 Fisher Obj. 26. But courts deem it appropriate to compare derivative and similarly sized class 19 settlements. See, e.g., PA Order 10-11 & n.7 (citing In re Atmel Corp. Derivative Litig., 2010 20 WL 9525643, at *12 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2010)). Fisher’s preferred comparison, moreover, 21 supports the requested fee, because (1) the cash recovery to Wells Fargo exceeds each of those 22 “comparable” settlements by over $90 million—which Fisher acknowledges is ““the most critical 23 factor in granting a fee award,”” Fisher Obj. 20 (quoting In re Omnivision Techs., Inc., 559 F.

24 ⁶ While factor (2)—“the length this case has transpired”—reflects “the typical time-to-final 25 approval” in the Fitzpatrick Study, three years “is still a long time to wait to be paid, particularly 26 when considering that counsel here have expended significant costs and expenses in prosecuting 27 the litigation, for which they are not seeking reimbursement.” Id. ¶ 29. Further, given the benefit 28 to Wells Fargo of moving past the fake-account scandal, Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s expediency in achieving this Settlement should weigh in their favor.

⁷ In In re Volkswagen “Clean Diesel” Marketing, Sales Practices & Products Liability Litigation, which Frank cites, the court rejected Volkswagen’s attempt to exclude Professor Fitzpatrick’s opinions as “improper expert testimony.” 2017 WL 1352859, at *3 n.3 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 12, 2017).

1 Supp. 2d 1036, 1046 (N.D. Cal. 2008)); (2) all but one of those cases involved self-interested 2 transactions or acquisitions, not these far more difficult Caremark “failure to monitor” claims; 3 (3) the 18.9% average fee award in those cases exceeds the mean fee (17.9%) recorded in the 4 Fitzpatrick Study for securities class settlements of $100-250 million; and (4) in each of the 5 cases Fisher cites, the court awarded counsel the fee they sought (see Fisher Obj. 27-29).

6 Fisher also contends the fee should be lower than the 20% this Court approved in Hefler 7 because Wells Fargo stands to receive between 6.9% and 21.8% of its potential damages, and 8 class plaintiffs’ expert estimated the settlement amount represented 15% to 137% of the potential 9 class recovery. While even on their face these percentages indicate the $240 million cash 10 component potentially reflects (at 21.8%) a greater percentage recovery than the class settlement, 11 the more-relevant point is that even Co-Lead Plaintiffs’ “low-end” recovery estimate “exceeds 12 ‘recoveries achieved in . . . securities fraud class actions of similar size (over $1 billion in 13 estimated damages), which settled for median recoveries of 2.5 percent between 2008 and 2016, 14 and 3 percent in 2017.’” PA Order 10-11 (ellipsis in original) (quoting Hefler, 2018 WL 15 6619983, at *8); see also Omnivision, 559 F. Supp. 2d at 1046 (“a total award of approximately 16 9% of the possible damages . . . weigh[ed] in favor of granting the requested 28% fee”).

17 B. Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s Lodestar, Including Rates and Hours for Staff and 18 Contract Attorneys, Is Well Justified and Exhaustively Detailed.

19 Frank and Miller challenge Plaintiffs’ Counsel’s use of staff and contract attorneys, and 20 Frank further claims Plaintiffs’ Counsel provide insufficient detail to support their lodestar.
 21 They are wrong in both respects.

22 First, these Professional Objectors advocate billing contract attorneys (and, Miller 23 proposes, staff attorneys) at cost—a “hardline position” even their primary authority (Anthem)
 24 acknowledges no court has adopted. See In re Anthem, Inc. Data Breach Litig., 2018 WL 25 3960068, at *18 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 17, 2018) (objector “identifie[d] no case” so holding). Frank 26 and Miller also speculate staff attorneys, which Frank contends should be billed at $240 per 27 hour, are “systematically overbilled by co-lead counsel,” and deride their contributions as 28 “unskilled document review” or “largely clerical work.” Frank Obj. 16, 17; Miller Obj. 3. But

1 the facts are that these staff and contract attorneys—who have impressive professional and 2 educational backgrounds—performed high-level review and analysis, including specifically for 3 deposition preparation, akin to junior-level associates. See, e.g., Fee Mot. 22.; Lief Cabraser 4 Decl. (Dkt. 278-7) Exs. 2, 3; Saxena White Decl. (Dkt. 278-8) Exs. 2, 3. As “[t]he determination 5 of the reasonable fee is not made by reference to rates actually charged, but by reference to the 6 prevailing market rate in the community for similar services of lawyers of reasonably 7 comparable skill, experience and reputation,” Fleming v. Kemper Nat’l Servs., Inc., 373 F. Supp.
 8 2d 1000, 1007 (N.D. Cal. 2005), the $295 to $420 hourly rates billed for these attorneys are well 9 justified. See also, e.g., In re Lioderm Antitrust Litig., 2018 WL 4620695, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Sept.
 10 20, 2018) (approving fee request including contract attorney time at market rates); Andrews v.
 11 Lawrence Livermore Nat’l Sec., LLC, 2012 WL 160117, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 18, 2012) 12 (rejecting argument that “for purposes of determining reasonable hourly rates, an attorney’s 13 status as a contract attorney, as opposed to his or her employment as an associate, is a proper 14 substitute for evaluating an attorney’s actual experience or skills”).⁸

15 Relying on a self-styled “best practice” contrived from their own supposition and scant 16 dicta (Frank Obj. 16), the Professional Objectors ignore that courts regularly approve rates for 17 staff and contract attorneys similar to those requested here. See, e.g., Optical Disk Drive, 2016
 18 WL 7364803, at *8 (approving rates of $300-$350 for staff and contract attorneys); Rose v. Bank 19 of Am. Corp., 2014 WL 4273358, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2014) (approving $325 rate for 20 attorney “who held the titles of both Law Clerk and Contract Attorney”). Indeed, courts have 21 approved these rates for similar work performed by some of the same staff and contract 22 attorneys. See, e.g., Fiat Chrysler, supra n.8; In re Bank of N.Y. Mellon ADR FX Litig., No. 16-23 cv-00212-JPO-JLC (S.D.N.Y.) (Oetken, J.), Dkt. 154 (reporting $415 rate for Lief Cabraser

24 ⁸ Frank’s assertion, without authority, that “rates claimed for staff attorneys—up to $415/hour—25 actually exceed the costs these firms could credibly bill for junior associates doing the same work” 26 (Frank Obj. 17) does not reflect actual practice. See, e.g., In re Chrysler-Dodge-Jeep Ecodiesel
 27 Mktg., Sales Practices & Prods. Liab. Litig., No. 17-md-02777-EMC (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2017) 28 (Chen, J.) (“Fiat Chrysler”), Dkt. 181, at 9 (permitting use of “junior associates, contract, and staff attorneys” for document review, and providing that “[I]awyers who perform initial document analysis and coding will be billed at an hourly rate consistent with the market rate for junior associates”); Dkt. 538-1, Ex. A (reporting $415 rates for Lief Cabraser staff and contract attorneys, including several who worked on this case); Dkt. 561 (approving fee).

1 staff attorneys, including several who worked on this case) & Dkt. 161 (approving fee); In re
2 Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp. Forex Transactions Litig., No. 12-md-2335 (S.D.N.Y.) (Kaplan, J.), 3 Dkt. 622-1 (reporting rates of $375-$425 for contract attorneys, including several who worked 4 on this case (having since been hired as staff attorneys)) & Dkt. 642, at 17 (Court: “I accept the 5 lodestar. I accept as fair, reasonable and accurate everything that went into it.”). Further, in 6 rejecting an objector’s argument in Hefler “that fees should be reduced because ‘the great bulk of 7 the time in the case’ was billed by staff attorneys rather than senior partners,” the Court observed 8 that “[b]ecause the staff attorneys have lower billing rates, . . . this results in a lower lodestar, 9 which factors into the Court’s cross-check.” 2018 WL 6619983, at *15. The Court accordingly 10 approved staff attorney rates of $340 to $395. Id. & Dkt. 240-5. The use of staff and contract 11 attorneys for discovery work here likewise reflects a judicious allocation of resources that 12 benefited Wells Fargo (and its shareholders), as assigning associates with correspondingly higher 13 rates to those tasks might have generated unnecessary lodestar.

14 Even in Anthem, on which the Professional Objectors lean heavily, Judge Koh rejected a 15 proposed “categorical rule that contract and staff attorneys must be billed at cost.” 2018 WL 16 3960068, at *18. In the cases the Anthem objector cited—on which Frank also relies—“counsel 17 had billed the contract attorneys as expenses (rather than as part of the lodestar), and the courts 18 approved those expenses without requiring that approach.” Id. (distinguishing Dial Corp. v.
19 News Corp., 317 F.R.D. 426, 438 (S.D.N.Y. 2016); Banas v. Volcano Corp., 47 F. Supp. 3d 957, 20 980 (N.D. Cal. 2014)). While the court in Anthem “commend[ed] the practice of treating 21 contract attorney work as a cost,” it applied a $240 rate for staff and contract attorneys, “the low 22 end of the range that [plaintiffs’ counsel’s expert] Professor [William] Rubenstein has identified 23 as having been approved in federal class actions,” adding that for future cases the court “is 24 willing to receive documentation justifying a lower or higher rate.” Id. at *18, *20. While the 25 rates billed for staff and contract attorneys here are appropriate, even applying a $240 rate as in 26 Anthem would result in a 3.57 multiplier (with a lodestar of $19,069,917.50), within the “typical” 27 range for common fund cases. Hefler, 2018 WL 6619983, at *14.

28

1 Frank also cites the special master’s recommendation in Arkansas Teacher Retirement
 2 System v. State Street Bank & Trust Co. (which is subject to pending objections to the district 3 judge) that contract attorneys be treated as a cost, while ignoring that the special master approved 4 of staff attorney rates of $335 to $515. 2018 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 111409, at *232, *238 (D. Mass.
 5 May 14, 2018). As in State Street, staff attorneys did more than “first-level document review” in 6 this case, including “digest[ing] complex information” and preparing “witness memoranda for 7 deposition”—the “same kind of work done by associates at large firms.” Id. at *233. The 8 lodestar should appropriately reflect those efforts. Further, the State Street special master’s 9 attempt to distinguish contract from staff attorneys contradicts his prior observation that “similar 10 work justifies similar rates.” Id. at *239. The staff and contract attorneys here did substantively 11 identical work; there is no basis to treat the former akin to associates while relegating the latter 12 to a firm expense in determining a reasonable fee. This Court should not be the first to do so.

13 Ultimately, the Court “need not weigh in on this conflict, . . . because even if the Court 14 were to reduce the Plaintiffs’ lodestar to reflect the contract attorneys’ lower billing rates” (CRT, 15 2016 WL 4126533, at *9) and apply a discounted rate of $300 for all staff attorneys (i.e., the 16 lowest rate billed for any staff attorney on the case), the resulting multiplier would be 3.90 (with 17 a lodestar of $17,455,289). That remains within the presumptively reasonable range.⁹

18 Second, Frank “suspects” this case suffers from “excessive” billing, but claims it is 19 “impossible to estimate the overstatement” because Plaintiffs’ Counsel do not provide enough 20 “detail.” Frank Obj. 18. The five firms whose lodestar is included for crosscheck purposes have 21 submitted nearly 150 pages of documentation detailing (1) the work and hours each timekeeper 22 contributed, including (a) the hours each timekeeper devoted to particular categories of work 23 during each month, (b) the portion of total lodestar devoted to particular categories of work

24 _____
 25 ⁹ For this analysis, Co-Lead Counsel apply (i) $35 per hour—the lowest rate paid for any contract 26 attorney at any time during this litigation—to all contract attorney time (including for time billed 27 by contract attorneys who became staff attorneys during the pendency of this litigation), even 28 though Co-Lead Counsel paid more for a substantial portion of contract attorney time in this case; and (ii) $300 per hour—the lowest rate billed for any staff attorney at any time during this litigation—to all staff attorney time, even though most staff attorney time was billed at a higher rate. In their opening brief (Fee Mot. 23 n.13), Co-Lead Counsel provided an alternative lodestar

1 during each month, and (c) the hours and lodestar each timekeeper devoted to particular 2 categories of work for the entirety of the case; and (2) describing each timekeeper's role in the 3 case and his or her professional and educational history. Lieff Cabraser Decl. & Exs. 1-6; 4 Saxena White Decl. & Exs. 1-6; Glancy Decl. (Dkt. 278-9) & Exs. 1-6; Robbins Arroyo Decl.
 5 (Dkt. 278-10) & Exs. 1-6; Prickett Jones Decl. (Dkt. 278-11) & Exs. 1-6. The Court has 6 approved precisely these types of submissions in other cases. See, e.g., Hefler, 2018 WL 7 6619983, at *14; Rodman, 2018 WL 4030558, at *7. Frank thus provides no credible basis for 8 requiring daily time records. See, e.g., Rodman, 2018 WL 4030558, at *7 (rejecting objector's 9 argument for "actual billing records"); Dyer, 303 F.R.D. at 333-34 (same).

10 He nonetheless contends that without those records, the Court "is unable to confirm that 11 plaintiffs ceased document review after settlement [in principle] was reached" on December 12, 12 2018, given that the lodestar contains time through June 2019, including 2,405.70 hours for 13 document review in December 2018. Frank Obj. 18. Plaintiffs' Counsel attest that no work was 14 devoted to discovery after December 12—2 ½ months before the Parties finalized the Settlement 15 Stipulation—and the hours billed to discovery during the first two weeks of December were 16 spread over 28 timekeepers, for an average of 86 hours. That time is reasonable, as the Parties 17 were actively litigating the case under an aggressive schedule. See infra pp. 15-16. Frank 18 retrospectively assumes settlement was "especially likely and imminent" (Frank Obj. 19); the 19 reality was far different, as Judge Weinstein (Ret.)—who (along with his colleague Jed Melnick) 20 conducted the mediations that led to the Settlement—attests. Weinstein Final Approval/Fee Decl.
 21 ¶¶ 7-8. In any event, there is no rule demanding that counsel cease discovery or other litigation-22 related work upon reaching a settlement in principle, before a formal agreement is finalized. In 23 Hefler, for example, confirmatory discovery after the parties reached an agreement in principle 24 accounted for the vast majority of the lodestar. See Hefler, Dkt. 239, at 21 & Ex. 5.

25 C. Objectors' Claim that Plaintiffs' Counsel Faced "Minimal Risk" Disregards 26 Applicable Law and the Record.

27 Frank's and Fisher's supposition that this case involved little risk is belied by the law, 28 facts, and procedural history. Perhaps their most-blatant delusion—that Co-Lead Counsel faced

1 no risk at the pleading stage and “demand futility was essentially admitted” (Fisher Obj. 22)—is 2 refuted by the dismissal of the California State Derivative Action, with the court concluding 3 plaintiffs’ allegations “d[id] not allow [it] to infer that directors knew of the illegal sales 4 practices or promoted or encouraged them knowing that they were illegal and/or for the purpose
5 of obtaining personal benefit.” May 10, 2017 Demurrer Order 7. Co-Lead Counsel’s successful 6 efforts to stay the California case prevented the state court from dismissing it entirely, which 7 would have endangered this Court’s favorable ruling as to Co-Lead Plaintiffs’ complaint. Far 8 from “self-interest[ed]” (Fisher Obj. 4 n.4), those efforts protected Wells Fargo’s interests, which 9 could otherwise have been irreparably impaired.

10 Nor did the risks to recovery dissipate after the pleading stage. The Delaware Actions 11 posed an existential threat of issue or claim preclusion until June 2018, when, again due to Co-12 Lead Counsel’s efforts—and over Defendants’ strategic objections—those cases were stayed or 13 otherwise resolved. Additionally, as this Court recognized in preliminarily approving the 14 Settlement, “significant obstacles remain to proving [Co-Lead Plaintiffs’] case and prevailing at 15 trial.” PA Order 8. Foremost was the standard for proving “possibly the most difficult theory in 16 corporation law upon which a plaintiff might hope to win a judgment,” In re Caremark Int’l Inc.
17 Derivative Litig., 698 A.2d 959, 967 (Del. Ch. 1996), which Co-Lead Counsel would have faced 18 (without the benefit of pleading-stage inferences) at summary judgment and trial. See, e.g., 19 Weinstein Final Approval/Fee Decl. ¶¶ 5-8. Among the numerous arguments advanced during 20 the mediation process, including with the aid of a former Delaware Vice Chancellor, Defendants 21 pointed to Board-level initiatives throughout the Relevant Period to address the Improper Sales 22 Practices. Id. at 6. Given the high standard for Caremark claims, Defendants might have 23 successfully persuaded a jury they had satisfied their fiduciary obligations and the blame lay 24 instead with rogue lower-level employees. Indeed, Co-Lead Counsel have found no Caremark 25 case where similar oversight claims against independent directors were successfully litigated 26 through trial, and Objectors likewise cite none. These risks compounded the already significant 27 challenges to prevailing on Co-Lead Plaintiffs’ federal securities claims.

28

1 The Court can readily dispense with Objectors’ suggestion that the regulatory actions, 2 which “concerned Wells Fargo’s underlying fraudulent consumer practices,” virtually ensured 3 Defendants’ liability here. Hefler, 2018 WL 6619983, at *15. Those proceedings “did not 4 reduce the costs or risks of litigating this securities [derivative] case or help establish elements of 5 the securities claims such as materiality, scienter, or loss causation,” id., or the critical Caremark
6 claims. Indeed, neither the Federal Reserve nor any other government entity has imposed 7 sanctions, levied charges, or instituted civil or criminal actions against any Wells Fargo 8 executives in their individual capacity, much less found the outside directors acted in bad faith.
9 See Reiter v. Fairbank, 2016 WL 6081823, at *1, *13-14 (Del. Ch. Oct. 18, 2016) (plaintiff 10 “failed to plead with particularity that a majority of a ten-member board,” which included “nine 11 outside directors,” acted “in such an egregious manner” to “sustain a finding” of bad faith). And 12 the Oversight Report, on which Objectors rely, purported to exculpate the Board—including 13 criticizing certain executives for failing to adequately alert directors to sales practices issues—14 potentially arming Defendants with additional arguments against demand futility.

15 Co-Lead Counsel also confronted imposing obstacles to establishing Wells Fargo 16 suffered damages proximately caused by Defendants’ breaches of duty or securities violations.
17 Notably, only $186.5 million of the $1.1 billion out-of-pocket damages Co-Lead Plaintiffs would 18 seek at trial is attributable to regulatory fines and penalties. See Dkt. 272, at 2 n.2. The 19 remainder relates to investigations and associated litigation costs, as well as remediation 20 measures largely consisting of marketing efforts, with only $6.1 million in consumer refunds. Id.
21 at n.3. Defendants would argue those damages stemmed from unrelated alleged misconduct or 22 constituted unrecoverable “business” expenses. As to the $1.4-2.4 billion in lost-business 23 damages, Defendants could point to the Company’s increasing profits even after the Improper 24 Sales Practices were disclosed. They would contend any damages would have been incurred 25 regardless of their actions during the Relevant Period or were entirely offset by gains from cross-26 selling practices generally. Objectors account for none of those risks.

27 Finally, Frank suggests any risk essentially disappeared after the Parties engaged in a 28 series of unsuccessful mediations. But in fact the prospects for settlement remained highly

1 uncertain until the last mediation session, in early December 2018. During the mediation process
2 Co-Lead Plaintiffs rejected several offers to settle for an inferior recovery, and instead continued 3 to press Wells Fargo's claims. Further, belying Frank's supposition that settlement was 4 "especially likely and imminent" after September 2018 (Frank Obj. 19), Co-Lead Plaintiffs and 5 Defendants reported in their October 9, 2018 joint case management statement (Dkt. 255) that 6 they were engaged in multiple discovery and scheduling disputes and preparing for more than 40 7 depositions. Indeed, the Parties were still intensely negotiating a potential settlement even 8 during the final mediation session on December 4, 2018, which ended with a Mediator's 9 proposal that was not accepted until December 12, 2018. Objectors' unfounded assumptions 10 regarding this litigation's purportedly low risk simply do not withstand scrutiny.

11 D. The Record Supports Crediting Co-Lead Counsel for Helping Achieve the 12 Reforms and Clawbacks, But the Fee Is Reasonable In Any Event.

13 While Frank and Fisher attempt to surmise the provenance of every dollar clawed back 14 by Wells Fargo as well as the Reforms it implemented, the primary question for this fee request 15 is whether Co-Lead Counsel—and the derivative case they pursued for more than two years—16 deserve enough credit for those measures to justify a 3% upward adjustment to the 25% fee 17 benchmark. See, e.g., Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶ 28. The record shows the answer is yes.

18 The Parties, as well as the Mediators, acknowledge "facts alleged in the Derivative 19 Action" played a "significant" role in Wells Fargo's decision to adopt the Reforms and 20 Clawbacks, and Wells Fargo itself acknowledges this case contributed $80 million worth of 21 those measures. See, e.g., Settlement Stip. § II.F; Weinstein Decl. ¶ 12 ("The mediator's 22 proposal placed a combined value of $80 million on the [Reforms] and Clawbacks."). As these 23 Settlement terms are indisputably not the product of collusion, the Parties' agreement should be 24 accorded substantial deference. See, e.g., Klein v. Gordon, 2019 WL 1751839, at *2 (C.D. Cal.
25 Feb. 12, 2019) (noting with approval "the settlement agreement . . . acknowledges that [the] 26 derivative action contributed, at least in part, to the initial corporate reforms adopted by Opus 27 which are aimed at preventing future misconduct"). This is particularly true given that Wells 28 Fargo's attribution of credit to Co-Lead Counsel "can only decrease Wells Fargo's take from this

1 settlement,” thus exacting “a substantial financial price.” Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶ 28. Additionally, 2 as illustrated in the following chart (and supported by Exhibit A to the Settlement Stipulation), 3 Co-Lead Counsel expressly negotiated a number of the Reforms, which reflect the relief 4 requested in their Complaint:

| Compl. Prayer | Pls.’ Mediation Requests | Reforms Implemented |
|---|--|--|
| Strengthen Board oversight of Community Banking sales practices | Create Retail Customer Protection Committee to oversee retail sales practices and customer relationships | Created Conduct Management Office focused on conduct management and sales practice issues, which reports to Risk Committee and Board; created Compliance Oversight Subcommittee of Human Resources Committee |
| Strengthen corporate disclosure controls | Establish Ombudsman Program, run by Office of Ethics Oversight & Integrity Mandate that risk committees lead internal investigations | Designated senior audit manager in Internal Audit Group for sales practices matters; created Heads of Stakeholder Relations and Regulatory Relations; enhanced controls and customer feedback mechanisms to ensure account activity authorization |
| Improve Wells Fargo culture, particularly in Community Banking | Reconfigure internal audit process as retail practices audit Implement quarterly reporting to Audit & Examination Committee and other risk committees | Board training, evaluation and reporting of internal assessment and strengthening of Company culture; transferred employee ethics oversight to Human Resources Committee |
| Strengthen Board supervision of operations | Authorize Board Chairman or Vice Chairman to initiate internal investigations | Expanded Audit & Examination Committee’s oversight to legal and regulatory compliance; appointed new Board members to Risk, Human Resources, and Governance & Nominating Committees; required that Chairman and Vice Chairman be independent, non-employee directors |
| Revise Board composition | Withdraw nomination of five Board directors | Nine directors departed, seven new directors appointed; separated Board Chairman and CEO positions |

22 Against those record facts, Objectors’ assertion that neither Co-Lead Counsel’s efforts
 23 nor the threat of significant liability from this derivative action played any role in Wells Fargo’s
 24 decisions to implement the Reforms or claw back executive compensation during the litigation’s 25 pendency is unavailing. See, e.g., Atmel, 2010 WL 9525643, at *11 (according counsel credit 26 where reforms “were all adopted after the federal derivative actions were filed” and Atmel 27 represented “that the filing of the actions and later settlement negotiations were material factors 28 in the implementation of the measures”). Further, contrary to Objectors’ suggestion, Co-Lead

1 Counsel do not dispute that the results of Wells Fargo’s internal investigation or the regulatory 2 actions also contributed to the Reforms and Clawbacks. Indeed, the Parties’ attribution to this 3 Settlement of less than half of the Clawbacks’ total value answers Objectors’ concerns regarding 4 funds that may have been clawed back regardless of this case.

5 Additionally, that attributing $20 million to Plaintiffs’ Counsel for the Reforms reflects 6 an “estimate” (Fisher Obj. 17) does not preclude considering it in assessing the fee. See Atmel, 7 2010 WL 9525643, at *11 (rejecting objector’s argument that “Plaintiffs’ failure to quantify the 8 value of the remedial measures is ‘fatal’” to considering them as part of the fee request). If it 9 did, lawyers would virtually never be entitled to credit for pursuing corporate governance 10 measures, and “rational counsel w[ould] not spend their time and money pursuing [non-cash] 11 relief—even when it may be as or more important than cash.” Fitzpatrick Decl. ¶ 15. Corporate 12 governance expert Professor Jeffrey Gordon concludes, moreover, the Reforms’ value may 13 “exceed[] even a substantial out-of-pocket recovery” (Gordon Decl. (Dkt. 278-2) ¶ 20), and 14 Professor Michael Santoro notes the “substantial impact” the Reforms could have on Wells 15 Fargo’s “current economic performance and long-term sustainability” (Santoro Decl. (Dkt. 270-16 4) ¶¶ 53-54). The $20 million figure assigned to the Reforms thus may significantly undervalue 17 them. Finally, even if the Court determines the value of the Reforms and Clawbacks is lower 18 than the Parties have agreed, or concludes Co-Lead Counsel deserve no credit for them, the other 19 factors supporting a 28.33% fee from the $240 million cash recovery would render it reasonable.
20 See, e.g., Rodman, 2018 WL 4030558, at *6 (approving a 28% fee where “the exceptionally 21 strong result obtained, the risk undertaken by counsel litigating on contingency, the complexity 22 of the legal issues, and the duration of the litigation all weigh[ed] in favor of an upward 23 adjustment,” and “the size of the common fund weigh[ed] in favor of a downward adjustment”).

24 E. Co-Lead Counsel Should Allocate the Fee as They Deem Appropriate.

25 In exercising their “ultimate authority to determine how the aggregate fee is to be 26 allocated among counsel,” Frank Obj. 23 (quoting Newberg on Class Actions § 15:23 (5th ed.)), 27 courts often recognize “lead counsel are better suited than a trial court to decide the relative 28

1 contributions of each firm and attorney.” In re Cathode Ray Tube (CRT) Antitrust Litig., 2017 2 WL 5969318, at *1 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 28, 2017). So too, here.

3 Frank relies on decisions addressing disputes among counsel or other extraordinary 4 circumstances. In In re High Sulfur Content Gasoline Products Liability Litigation, the Fifth 5 Circuit criticized the district court’s approval of a fee for “more than six dozen plaintiffs’ 6 lawyers” where the allocation was proposed “in an ex parte hearing and apparently without 7 benefit of supporting data,” and the court “seal[ed] the individual awards; prevent[ed] all counsel 8 from communicating with anyone about the awards; require[ed] releases from counsel who 9 accepted payment; and limit[ed] its own scope of review of objections to the allocation.”
 10 517 F.3d 220, 223-24 (5th Cir. 2008). The court of appeals notably distinguished the situation 11 where, as here, “all attorneys . . . come to an agreement about dividing up fees.” Id. at 234. And 12 in In re LendingClub Securities Litigation, counsel disclosed—similar to Plaintiffs’ Counsel 13 here—they “agreed to allocate 18 percent of the 13.1 total percent requested (or 2.36 percent of 14 the total recovery) to co-lead counsel in the state action and the balance to federal lead counsel.”
 15 2018 WL 4586669, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2018).¹⁰ Those cases do not assist Frank.

16 Frank suggests plaintiffs’ counsel in the Rosenfeld Action falsely represented they did not 17 receive compensation, or a “promise” of compensation, from “any Defendant” in exchange for 18 dismissing the case. Frank Obj. 25; Dkt. 281-7 at 4. But those counsel have in fact received 19 nothing from any Defendant, and their compensation here will come solely from Co-Lead 20 Counsel’s fee. Further, that compensation is appropriate given the benefit Delaware Derivative 21 Counsel provided to Wells Fargo by dismissing or staying those cases. Had those cases 22 proceeded, the threat of claim or issue preclusion would have persisted, jeopardizing this Court’s 23 favorable rulings and impeding Co-Lead Plaintiffs’ efforts to achieve this extraordinary 24 recovery.¹¹

 27 May 14, 2019) (cited at Frank Obj. 23) (assessing reasonableness of proposed fee distribution 28 where one of the class counsel engaged in “troubling” conduct, including possibly “encourag[ing] opt-outs,” which “created an unacceptable risk to the plaintiff class’s settlement negotiations”).

¹¹ Frank further posits, without evidence, Delaware Derivative Counsel could be double-paid to the extent they also receive a fee in connection with the settlement of the CPI Derivative Actions.
